

Dr. Kim Johnson is the Division Chief of Memory Disorders at Duke in the Department of Neurology. She completed a psychiatry residency at Duke and geriatric psychiatry fellowship at Yale where she became interested in Alzheimer's Disease Research. At Duke she is also a Co-Leader in the Duke/UNC Alzheimer's Disease Research Center and the Director of Clinical Trials for the Memory Division.